The appointment of Alexander G. Bearn as the new Editor of The American Journal of Medicine is a happy event for all of us who have been and continue to be associated with this great Journal. During the period of my stewardship of the Journal, his invaluable appraisals of papers submitted to him for review were of inestimable value to me in judging their suitability and quality, especially in the difficult months between Bill Grace's incapacity from illness and his death during which I bore full responsibility for what was published or rejected. Dr. Bearn will bring to his new task the scholarship and knowledge that are so important in maintaining the continuity of the Green Journal as a great journal.

Arthur J. Antenucci, M.D.
